The Governor with pecketing a bill establishing the Dew county of Franklin, which passed both branches of the Lagislature, was correctly engrossed, and was cent to the Governor for his grossed, and was sent to the seventer for his signature. The proposed new county was in the upper Fox River country, and its boundaries were not so framed as to permit Mondello to be 'finade the county seat. Montello is a point in which Guy. in this neighborhood, and who is the Governor's agent and partner at Montello—spent the winter at Madison to defeat the bill. The Governor's consured very severely for his course in, relation to this matter, for it is alleged he should have vetoed the till if he wished to hill it.

This pocketing, mutilating, and otherwise disposing of or amending bills pending before the two Houses, or of important documents, is becoming too serious an evil, and it is one which this Mr. Kelsey is no estranger to. The session before the last he was a member of the House from the Montello district, in Marquette Co.—The settlers on the line of the late Milwankee and Rock River Canal becoming alarmed for their safety about the Canal Land mortagages they had paid S. Park Coan, late Attornoy Contents of the State, petitioned the Legislature for reiled. They embraced a large mander of the best citizens of Milwankee, Wackeel a and Jefferson counties, and as Mr. Barstow was an the ground at Madison and knew all about the condition of the nortagages, and was to some extent implicated in the management of these of Dakin person countres, and as in: Burstow was an the ground at Madison and knew all about the cendition of the northagages, and was to some extent implicated in the management of those of Dakin and Jassup, it was of comes important that the subject should be jostpound until another session, which would be after the list fall's election. To this end, when the subject came up in the House, Mr. Kelsey moved that it should be referred to a select committee, which by courtery and osage made kim chairman. This gave him charge of the papers, and when pressed too warmly by the manbers interested in the matter for a report, in order to get the question up before the House, he put the papers into his pocket, ran off to Montelio, and was not seen again at Madisan during the session. Is it anything but reasonable for Gov. Barstow to pocket a bill, to cave Mr. Kelsey's interests, as well as his ewn, at Montelio?

To speak seriously, however, of this matter—is it not time such disgraceful devilury was brought to an end in this State? When are we to land, and what is to be the future reputation of this State, if such proceedings are to be permitted are problemed? The oass, without distinction on an end in this State? Where are we to land, and what is to be the future reputation of this State, if such proceedings are to be permitted and prolonged? The piece, without distinction of party, should come out openly and boldly against all such iniquity. Particularly do we finisk it the doty of the democratic portion of the press so to do. If things continue as they now are, and are permitted to go on unrabaked, the State will be hopelessly whigh at the next State election. When the people of Wisconsh and once fully assured of the existence of flagrant aboves, under the sention and to further the proubiery and ambitious interests of those State officers whose duty it is to protect and defend rather than plunder them, the Democratic party, if it give but even a seeming acquiescence to the corruption, will be too apt to soffer the consequences with severelly. The true policy for particles, as well as mer, is, to be honest in all their relations to society and the world. The Democratic party professes to be the guardian and advocate of certain great and benificent principies, laving for their object the amelioration of the pursent condition and future advancement of the human race. When any members proce recreate to those principles, whether they be Mr. Barstow, Mr. Kelsey, or some other little spacks nearch home, it is a matter of duty to call public attention to the renegades.— Wanketha Democrat.

Mil.waukbe,-Mr. Buok, of the Fond du Lac Herald, recently visited this city on a business grand, and thus records the result of his observations :

Milwankee is a fice old town, although quite young; that is, it is young in years, but old in progress and enterprise. Hers' is a full-grown, manly, progressive enterprise, and one which every city would do well in imitate. Few, very manly, progressive enterprise, and the whenevery city would do well to initiate. Few, very few are the men who visit that city on business, ever for a moment "look about town." to see what difficulties have been overcome in building up a town of which our State may well be proud.—Athough we passed through the place as early as 1845, and have not unfrequently visited it since, yet we were never so fully aware of the difficulties which have been and are being overcome, to attein for it is present greatness. Through the politeness of Mr. Watson, of the Sentinel, we were favored with a drive through the city and its environs. Its limits are being rapidly extended in all directions, and its wealthy inhabitants are displaying their good taste by creating residences in the retired portions, which would do honor to a Brooklyn, a Boston or a New Haven.

A Junas .- On Tuesday afternoon a party com posed of citizens, sailors in navy blue, -and -po-lice, were seen en route for the Police Office, the entre of attraction appearing to be a bareleaded individual who bad been apparently somewhat roughly handled. We learn the thair has the following origin and explanation.

Soon after the arrival of the U.S. Steamer,

Soon after the arrivar of the U.S. Steamer, Mishigan at this port, a man was found to have deserted, and the usual reward, $30 was offered for his return to the ship. On Tuesday, host rowed down to the steamer containing the deserter in irons, and a sailor, who claimed the money for his capture. The man was sent below for double irons, and the claim deferred for an hour care. In the meanwhile the prisoner obtained most astounding villainy and scoundtelism of his captor, who, it seems, being an old man-of-wars man, and knowing the usual foe for the teturn of deserters from the service, came on board the Michigan two days ago, and making the acquaintance of the man, after plying him with liquor, entired him away, with a promise of good employment in a merchant vessel, and then delivered him up as narrated. The villain came to the steamer again in a few hours for his money, and the analors, laving a day on shore, nosted the steamer again in a few hours for his money, not the sailors, having a day on above, posted themselves in various parts of the L.C. The cry of "stop thie?" having been raised; quite a crowd collected and the victim was taken by the police before the Mayor, the sailors following, expecting to see him dealt with according to law, but through lack of proper representation of the case, or for lack of proper representation of the case, or for example's sake, the fellow's complaint against example's same, the islow's companie against three of the sailors present for easault and battery, resulted in a fine of $6 each. How TEE LAWYERS DIFFER .- The following anecdote of a legal gentleman of Missouri, was copied many pears ago, from a newspaper of that State:

"Being once opposed to S—then lately a member of Congress, he remarked as follows to the jury, upon some point of disagreement between them:
"Here my brother S—and I differ materially. Now this after all, is very natural. Men seldor see things in the same light; and they may dom see things in the same light; and they may disagree in the principles of law, and that, too, very honestly; while at the same time, neither, perhaps, can conceive any earthly reason why hey should. And this is merely because they

Now, let us suppose for the sake of illustration, that a man should come into this room and boldly assert that my brother S—'s head (here he laid his head very formiliarly upon the large chuckle head of his opponent) is a squash. I, on the other hand, should maintain, and perhaps with equal confidence, that it was a head.

Now here would be the difference—doubtless an honest difference—of opinion. We might argue till doomsday, and never agree.—You often see men arguing upon subjects just as empty and trifmen arguing upon schlects just no empty and trif-ing as this! But a third person conding in, and orking at the neck and shoulders that support t would any at once that I had reason on my side; or if it was not a head, it at least occupied the TURKIER BRAVERY.—When crossing at Hit-chova, a single Turk exhibited a degree of bravery which would parallel anything of the kind per-formed in our Mexican wer. He was a private formed in our Mexican wer. He was a private soldier of the Bach Bayonk, and had, by some means, been separated from his regiment while retiring from the enemy. Seeing his unprotected position, three or four Russian troops ande a dash for him. But the Turk, undaunted, stood up to receive them, and as the foremost trooper swang his sword to deal the blow, the soldier, by a powerful effort, seized his horse and threw hi a powerful chort, seized his horse and threw him on his hauches, and then, coick as lightning, cleft the trooper's skuil. Then springing to the saddle, he turred to face the others, one of whom, by his uniform, betokened the officer. Instead of waiting the charge, he should the name of Allah, and spurred to the contest. With a single hand he maintained the unequal fight for some tirre, and until two out of four lay at his feet.—

biography as follows:

James Montgomery was born as long ago as November 4, 1771, at Irvine, in Avrshire. His father was a Moravian missionary, who, leaving his son in Yorkshire to be educated, went to the West Indies, where he and the poet's mother both died. When only twelve years old, the bent of the bey's mind was shown by the production of various small poems. These indications could not save him at first from the fate of the poor, and he was sent to earn his bread as assistant in a general shop. He thirsted for other occupatious, and one day set off with 3s ful in his pocket to walk to London, to seek fame and fortune. In his first effort he broke down, and for a while gave up his plat to take service in another situation. Only for a time, however, was he contant, and a second effort to reach the metropolis was unsuccessful. plan to take service in another situation. Only for a time, however, was he contaut, and a second effort to reach the metropolis was unsuccessful, so far as bringing him to the spot he had longed for, and unsuccessful to his main bope—that of finding a publisher for a volume of his verses.—But the bookseller, who refused Montgomery's prems accepted his labor, and made him his shopman. Fortune, however, as she generally does, smiled at last on the zealous youth, and in 1792 he gained a post in the establishment of Mr. Gales, a tookseller of Sheffield, who had act up a newspaper called The Sheffield Register. On this paper Montgomery worked on amore, and when his master had to fly from England to avoid imprisonment for printing articles too liberal for the then despotic Government of England, the young pact became the editor and publisher of the paper, the name of which he changed to Sheffield Fis. In the columns of this print he advocated political and political and religious freedom and such conduct secured for him the attentions of the Attarney-General, by whom he was prosecuted, fined and imprisoned; in the first histance For reprinting a song commemorating "The Fall of the Bastile;" in the second case for an account he gave of a riot in Sheffield. Confinement could not crush his love of political justice, and on his second release he went on advocating the could not crush his love of political justice, and on his second release he went on advocating the on his second release he went on advocating the doctrines of freedom as before in his paper and in his tooks. In the lengthy periods between those times and the present, the beliefs which James Moutgomery early pioneered in England have obtained general recognition, and, as men became more and more liberal, our poet gained more and more esteem. He contributed to magazines, and, despite adverse criticism, in the Edinburgh Reniem, established his right to rank as a poet. In 1797 he published "Prison Amusements;" in 1805, the "Ocean;" in 1809, "The West Indies;" and in 1812, "The World before the Flood," By these works he obtained the chief reputation he has since enjoyed. In 1819 appeared "Greenland," a poem in five cantes; and in 1828, "The Pelican Island and other Pecams." In 1831 the whole of his works were issued in one volume, 300, and of which two editions are in circulation; and in 1853, "Original Hymns, for Public, Private, and Social Devotion." That Spain is not disposed to part with the island of Cuba at present, seems pretty clear: and it Is no less clear that there is a determination in ters in less clear that thore is a determination in certain quarters to hurry the country into meas-sures which shall end in wresting it immediately from her. To this end, all that we hear lately about outrages committed and reparation refused, evidentify points. A pretext for the foreible seizure of Cuba is to be made if one does not present ignel. We have been watching with great anxiety the progress of things in this direction. Whither we possess Ouba or not, is not a matter of so much consequence as that our government should pursue a noble, just, magnanimous ourse ctowards other nations. We shall remain agreat empire without Cuba—perhaps the permanence of our Union is more certain without the possession of that island than with it—but the reputation of our country will be blackened with discrete to all time; if, upon any pretext, we take up the sword against Spain, with the real motive of stripping her of her possessions. If for the sake of making Cuba a dependency of the United States we wage a war which we should otherwise here been careful to avid, we shall deserve to take the place among nations which the burglar and the highwayman take among the members of civilized society.

The dishonor will be still greater if, boasting as we do of possession of freedom, we seizs upon Cuba for the sake of perpetuating slavery in that island. That this is the object which most of these who clamor for the possession of Cuba have in view, is not concaled; it is openly avowed in their journals and the speaches of their orators. Yet, in regard to the black population of the island, what has Spain done of which we have a right to complan? She has directed the slaves to be registry; a measure which will check the slave trade, by making the impurations from Africa worthiess to the trader. She has taken measures to promote the employment of white domestics on the island, to induce free laborers to settle there, and to raise-the moral condition of the blacks' y encouraging marriage. These measures dentity points. These measures are honorable to her; they are as wise as they are humans, and form one of the fairest pages in her legislation. We thank God that she was able to see in that humanity and true policy were the same. Shall we go to war with her because she has adopted measures so philanthropic and so well suited to their nursons—the suppression of well suited to their purpose—the suppression of the traffic in human beings?
